70 Injured In Belfast Bombing Railway Station

Badly Damaged By Bernard Weinraub BELFAST, March 22 (NYT).-A huge bomb exploded in the center of Belfast today, wrecking rooms in the city's largest hotel and leaving more than 70 persons injured. The homb—estimated at 100 to 150 pounds—demolished part of the Great Victoria Street Railway Station behin' the 12-story Europa Hotel. The blast, shortly after 3 p.m., rocked the city and sent hundreds of persons scrambling for cover along the busy street of shops and movie

"The bomb was planted in a van in the station's car park." a British Army spokesman said. "A man parked the van ran away and told a passerby that a bomb would go off in 30 minutes. Fifteen minutes later it went

Shrieking women, some of them carrying children, ran along Great Victoria Street. Sheets of glass plunged from the hotel. A giant flame poured through the smashed roof of the station.

Many of the injured included the hotel staff. There were no serious casualties.

"It was horrible," Geraldine McIntyre, a reservations clerk, said in the crowded lobby. "There was no warning and then the blast. We thought the end had come."

More than 70 cars were wrecked in the open-air garage beside the station, the railway link between Belfast and Dublin. Windows of the two-year-old hotel, where most journalists and visitors stay, were shattered.

The police said that they had received six telephone calls warning that a bomb had been planted near the Europa. "We had little chance to investigate them all in time," said a spokesman. "I can only say it was fortunate more people weren't injured."

Today's blast follows th plosion, two days ago, that left six persons dead when a boobytrapped car exploded on crowded Donegal Street. Four of the dead were buried today in emotional ceremonies in Belfast.

During the funeral procession for 27-year-old James Macklin, a sanitation worker, the bomb exploded behind the Europa. Women screamed as the cloud of dense smoke rose on the west side of Belfast, "They won't even let us bury our dead in peace," said one weeping woman.

Victim's Sons Cry

At the funeral of Samuel Trainor, a 40-year-old sanitation worker, the victim's two sons. Philip, 10, and Alan, 6, walked crying behind their father's coffin. A group of Mr. Trainor's colleagues from the Ulster Defense Regiment, a part-time militia similar to U.S. national guards, walked on both sides of the hearse. The coffin was drapped in a Union Jack.

Later, the Rev. Hedley W. Piunkett a Methodist minister at the funeral of another victim of Menday's blast, Sidney Bell, said bitterly at the funeral service: "One can only conclude that those responsible have lived in such an underworld of hate that they must have become subhuman. They must, however, know that they cannot escape the judgment

He added: "When you become Intimately involved with the broken hearts and shattered lives taking the headlines, you feel like shouting from the housetops, Men of violence, stop, stop, stop"."

In Constitutional Amendment

Women's Equal Status Move Approved by Senate, 84-to-8

By Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON, March 22 (WP) -Sweeping aside all proposed language changes by overwhelming margins, the Senate today sent the women's equal-rights constitutional amendment to the states by a vote of 84 to 8.

The historic vote ended a 49year struggle by both men's and women's organizations to win congressional approval for a constitutional amendment specifying that women are to receive absolute equality with men before the law. The House approved the measure last Oct. 12 by a 354-to-23 vote. A two-thirds vote was required in both chambers.

If ratified within seven years by three-quarters of the state legislatures (38 states), the proposal will become the 27th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. It will go into effect two years after ratification.

The key paragraph of the constitutional amendment reads, "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Sponsors of the amendment, led in the Senate by Birch Bayh, D. Ind., and Marlow W. Cook, R., Ey., and in the House by Martha W. Griffiths, D. Mich., said it would wipe out a broad spectrum of archaic state and federal laws and regulations which, though in some cases ostensibly designed to protect women, actually lock them into a subordinate role and limit their legal and economic rights.

They said the amendment will: • Wipe out state laws which impose limits on the types of jobs women may take and the number of hours they may work.

• Eliminate laws limiting women's rights in some states to handle property and start businesses on an equal basis with men.

• End discriminatory admission practices by state colleges and graduate schools, and bar discrimination against women in hiring and promotion in public schools and colleges.

 Forbid discrimination against women in state and local government jobs.

• End laws treating women more harshly in a number of criminal situations—for example, a state statute which permits (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

U.S. Panel Says End Penalties For Private Use of Marijuana

Despite its stated position of discouraging marijuana use, the commission in its 178-page report entitled "Marijuana: A Signal of Misunderstanding" debunked many commonly held ideas about marijuana

It said it could find no evidence that the moderate use of marijuana is either harmful or unhealthy, that it leads to the use of more dangerous drugs, or that it causes crimes or aggressive behavlor.

But, said Commission Chairman Raymond P. Shafer, any mindbending drug such as marijuana has the potential for harm. Moreover, he said that all the scientific information on the possible dan-gers of long-term marijuana use has not been collected. "We don't want sanction and approval given to this psychotropic substance only to find later on, as we have with tobacco and alsohol, that we shouldn't have."

But Mayor Richard J. Daley's Cook County Democratic organization suffered a double defeat, losing two crucial nominations in major upsets.

Sen, Muskie won by a nearly two-thirds majority in the preference primary against Mr. McCarthy, With almost all of the 10,353 precincts reporting, the vote was 747,674 (63 percent) for Sen, Muskie to 438,803 (37 per-cent) for Mr. McCarthy.

With 97 percent of the state's precincts counted in the delegate race, Sen. Muskie had 59 pledged or favorable, to 14 for Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota, with 87 uncommitted.

In the voting for 48 state delegates to the Republican National Convention, President Nixon won 44, two were uncommitted and two others were undecided with 91 percent of the precincts reporting. Sen. Muskie's Tilinois support was broad-based. He won among voters of all economic levels, but did particularly well among lowincome voters. Among low-income whites. Sen.

First U.S. Newsman Visits Space Center Near Moscow

By John Noble Wilford ZVEZDNY GORODOK, U.S.R., March 23 (NYT).-A visit to the place where the Russian astronauts live and train produces the clear impression that the Soviet Union is actively and optimistically expanding its space program. At-a time when the American program is contracting, construction is under way here on a large complex of buildings that the Russians say will house new training equipment for manned earth-orbiting laboratories, a high-priority Soviet effort. The facility should be completed this year.

And the Russian astronauts speak of preparations for forthcoming missions to test man's endurance during even longer periods of weightlessness. They do not discount their chances of landing on the moon, perhaps as early as 1975.

A one-day visit to Zvezdny Gorodok—which means stellar town but is usually translated as Star City-was the first by a Western correspondent. It included a long interview with Maj. Gen. Vladimir A. Shata iv. the 44-year-old astronaut of the three Soyuz missions who is now chief of astronaut training.

Space Cooperat --

After the interview, Gen. Shatalov volunteered a toast to the Soviet Union and the United States, "working together in space." Permission for the visit itself was another of several recent gestures toward warmer relations between the two nations, once intense space rivais. Star City, which in many respects is the Soviet equivalent of the Manned Spacecraft

Center in Houston, is situated about 25 miles northeast of downtown Moscow, near the industrial town of Schchelkovo.

It is not identified on any pine and birch trees. There is no sign at the guarded gate to suggest what lies down the narrow road into the public maps and is hidden from the highway by a forest of fir,

In a broad, snow-covered clearing less than a mile from the gate, there is a dark bronze statue of Yuri Gagarin, the first man to go into space. About a dozen modern buildings are in view - high - rise apartments where the astronauts and technicians live, a school their children attend, a hotel and small shopping center, the training facility. Population Estimate The Russians do not release statistics on the money and people involved in their space program. From the size and number of the apartment buildings, however, a rough estimate might be 1,500 to 2,000 innabitants at Star City. The place is smaller than the Houston Space Center because it does not also serve as the mission control complex and apparently has no primary responsibility for the management of spacecraft design and development,

But like Houston, Star City is where the astronauts undergo physical and technical training for their missions. Off in the forest, behind a green wood ience, are the training facilities -an office and classroom building, spacecraft simulator building, medical center, central heating plant, gymnasium, indoor swimming pool, athletic field and living quarters, where the astronauts rest and are examined after a flight. The training area is elected to nearly all visitors. 'Nothing secret about it," Gen. Shatalov said. "We just don't want journalists to interfere with the tronauts." However, Gen. Shatalov said that the medical center contained the centrifuge, a device a person's ability to withstand the high gravity forces of launching and re-entry. The astronauts call it the "devil's merry-go-round." Tested by Rotator In another building, there is a rotator, a cylindrical chamber in which the spacemen learn to maintain their orientation in the most extreme conditions. American space officials who visited Star City last year and were permitted to see the training area report that the computerized simulator of the Soyuz. the present generation of Soviet manned spacecraft, followed "principles similar to ours." At present, Gen. Shatalov said, there are about 50 astronauts in the program, about the same size as the American astronaut coros. A third of the Russians are civilian engineers, many of whom live in Moscow near the laboratories where they also work. The others are air force pilots, who live at Star City.

Preparations for a Russian space mission seem to differ only in details from those for American manned missions.

Russian astronauts are usually assigned to specific missions about a year before the planned launching. This is said to be about the time it takes to assemble their spacecraft, an enterprise they tollow closely with many visits to the production plant at an undisclosed place. For each mission, there are two back-up crews, as there are for Apollo.

Crews are chosen by a "commission" of about 20 members, These include medical spacecraft engineering experts, as well as Gen. Shatalov.

Most of the year is occupied with classroom work, learning the mechanics and electronics of the spacecraft and with practice in

Opponents of the amendment. He sharply criticized the direcled in the Senate by Sam J. "This is the road this support and child custody, as well as special labor protective laws, the proposed constitutional Mr. Meany long has been amendment would take away from women a set of protections far more valuable than they would members agreed to serve on the

But women's groups said they would be willing to accept liability to the draft in order to establish the principle of equality as part of the Constitution. In repeated responses to Sen. Ervin, Sen. Bayh told the Senate that women were unlikely to be assigned to combat roles if drafted because they would still have to meet tests of strength and physical skill for combat which only men were likely to pass.

At the same time, he said, the amendment would not wipe out all alimony, child-support and child-custody laws, but only force them to be interpreted or rewritten so as to give completely equal treatment to men and women, allowing the judge to use h's judgment. He said this might mean that in certain situations a judge would force a wife to pay alimony if her income was far higher than her husband's.

Husband's Responsibility Sen. Bayh said that normally, where the husband had a higher income, he would continue to have primary responsibility for family support and support of the children.

Sen. Ervin contended that the amendment would prohibit separate sleeping and toilet facilities for men and women in the Army, public buildings, prisons and other public facilities, and might force repeal of laws against rape, white slavery and sexual crimes against young girls. But Sen. Bayh said the amendment definitely would continue to permit separate sleeping and toilet facilities and would not bar laws against rape, homosexual cohabitation or molestation of minors provided they applied generally to both sexes. Sen. Ervin's attempts to write into the amendment specific assurances on these and similar points were rejected in a series of votes by rolicalls of 77 to 14, 72 to 17, 79 to 10, 78 to 12 and 82 to 9.

Supporters of the constitutional amendment said they voted against Sen. Ervin because his changes were unnecessary and because any change in the amendment's language would force a House-Senate conference where a majority of conferees were opponents of the amendment and might contrive to kill it by delay. Women's Lobby

The chief reason for passage of the amendment this year was a substantially improved lobbying effort by many women's organiza-tions, such as the National Organization of Women, National Women's Political Caucus and National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. In particular, the women put pressure on a number of Southern senators who would have liked to add a school antibusing clause to the amendment, warning them this tactic might kill the equal-rights amendment. At least four senators who had been expected to offer an anti-busing amendment declined to do so for fear it would anger women's Unlike Cape Kennedy, Baikonur has no simulators where the crew can have a last-minute practice of mission maneuvers.

In the last two days before launching, after the state commission approves the spaceship's readiness, the spacemen relax, exercise and see movies, usually light comedies. The identity and scope of the state commission has never been disclosed, but it presumably incor-porates many functions similar to those of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. On the morning of the launch-

In the Russian tradition, before a journey the men gather in one room of their living quarters and sit silently for a few moments. The silence is then broken by shouts of "Off we go." The men sign their names on the door as they leave for the launching pad.

During the flight, the families remain in Star City. The wives of other astronauts join the ing wives" to h the tension. Mrs. Vladimir A. Shatalov, wife of the chief of astronaut training, said that she was kept so busy baking cabbage pies for her guests that she had no time to worry.

The wives also gather to celebrate the landing and, as Gen. Shatalov complains, "usually Shatalov complains, "usually break all the china—I have had to buy new china three times. After the mission, the astronauts return to Star City for medical examinations and briefings with program directors. For short flights, this takes about three to five days. For the 18-Soyuz-9 in 1970, the two pilots stayed in virtual confinement for two weeks while their bodies readjusted to earth's gravity.

Gen. Shatalov and Alexei S. Yeliseyev, a civilian astronaut and engineer, adhere to the usual Soviet practice of declining to discuss specific timetables of future missions. "We don't announce the dates," the general said, "because we don't want to bind the people who are preparing the flight." But he suggested that new missions were possible in the next few months and that they should represent advances over past ones. Explaining the Soviet emphasis on earth-orbiting laboratories, Gen. Shatalov said:

"The space flights of the last 10 years showed that space may be very useful to mankind and that the most valuable uses lie nearest to earth. That's why you must create near-earth satellite laboratories. But first we have to learn how long man can live ug there. That's why we are going to go a slow way and with each expedition try to extend the length of the stay. This aim is at the core of our program." First Step Only

The chief of astronaut training said that Salynt represented "just the first step" in the spacestation work. If the Soviet Union plans much larger orbiting laboratory, however, American space sources in Washington think it could not launched until a more powerful rocket is successfully tested. Such a rocket, larger than the Saturn-5, is understood to have encountered serious difficulties before a planned test in 1969. A larger rocket would also be required for the Russians to attempt to land men on the moon, a goal they apparently once sought vigorously but then moved to lower priority in the wake were not planned "in the nearest made." future."

The freeze that the United States seeks on construction of missile-firing submarines now looms as the largest obstacle to an initial SALT agreement, it was learned. The Soviet Union has agreed in principle to limit defensive anti-ballistic missiles (ABMs) and also land-based in-tercontinental missiles (ICBMs), but it has insisted on postponing controls of sea-based systems to the planned second stage of SALT.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22 (AP).—Angela Davis's freedom on $102,500 bail will not be challenged even though the State Supreme Court has modified its ruling that freed her, the attorney general's office said.

The 28-year-old black militant is charged with murder, kidnap and conspiracy. She was freed Feb. 23—five days after the California Supreme Court abolished the death penalty. The trial is to begin Monday.

She had been jailed for 16 months under a California law which had prohibited ball in capital cases if "proof of guilt is evident or the presumption thereof is great."

The high court last Friday refused a rehearing on its abolition of the death penalty. But it modified the decision, declaring that the gravity of what previously were capital crimes remains and must be a factor in granting or denying bail.

Nun in Berrigan Case Warned Of 'Bigger' Act, Witness Says

By Betty Medsger

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 22 (WF).—Sister Elizabeth Mc-Allster told a group of 200 in Westchester. County, N.Y., in June of 1970 that she and others were working on something "substantial... something bigger than they had done previously," according to a surprise prosecution witness yesterday at the trial of Sister McAlister and six other anti-war activists.

"The women were startled," said Carolyn North, who moved here from New York shortly after she heard Sister McAlister speak to a Westchester Women for Peace meeting.

When she heard in January, 1971, that the defendants had been indicted, said Mrs. North,
"I thought... that's what she was talking about."

The seven are charged with conspiracy to kidnap presidential adviser Henry A Kissinger, to bomb heating tunnels under fedbuildings in Washington and to raid federal offices.

Moral Responsibility

In cross-examination of Mrs. North, defense attorneys maintained that Sister McAlister spoke to the group about taking public moral responsibility for draft raids and not about the crime with which she is now charged.

Defense attorney J. Thomas Menaker showed the witness a statement signed by 302 persons who took responsibility for June, 1970, draft raids in Delaware. Mrs. North acknowledged that the addresses of the signers indicated they were from the Westchester County area.

One of the government's pieces of evidence, a letter written that summer by Sister McAlister to another defendant, the Rev. Philip Berrigan, while he was in Lewisburg, Pa., Penitentiary, makes an apparent reference to the occasion. She wrote:

"Jogues [Sister Jogues Egan] and I went up to Westchester Friday afternoon for a session with some of the Women for Peace on the signatures business. We were both amazed at their seriousness and sense of dedication. There may be some hope from this sort of thing."

Although she couldn't identify Sister McAlister in the courtroom today, Mrs. North, in her midtwenties, said she was sure it was Sister McAlister she heard because she remembered her religious order, the order of the Sacred Heart of Mary.

"She belongs to the same religious order that taught me in grade school," said Mrs. North. They were semi-cloistered then. I was surprised that day because she was not in a habit.

she said, included Rep. Bella Abzug, D., N.Y., a professor and "some man running for Congress." Mrs. North, who said she called the FBI here Monday to report the 1970 incident, said she assumed the FBI already knew about it. Part of her motivation for calling them, she said, was the fact that "the FBI doesn't have a good press anymore."

FBI agent Delmar Mayfield, the 60th government witness, testi-fled yesterday that on or shortly before Sept. 1, 1970, he wrote FBI director J. Edgar Hoover a letter which he described the then convict Boyd F. Douglas jr. as "an accomplished confidence man."

Douglas, whose arrest records for check forgery and interstate transportation of stolen securities and assaulting an FBI agent began in 1958, is the chief source the government's information in the case.

Mr. Mayfield, who was the Lewisburg, Pa., agent to whom Douglas reported information about the defendants, Bucknell University students and his fellow inmates in 1970, testified during cross-examination that on Aug. 29, 1970, he asked Douglas if he would be available after his parole was completed to work for the FBI as an in-

Excerpts from Marijuana Report

(AP).-Here are key excerpiz from the report of the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse:

Extent of Use

On the basis of the commission-sponsored National Euryey, we have concluded that contemporary marijuana use is pervasive, involving all segments of the U.S. population. The survey estimated that about 24 million Americans over the age of 11 years, 15 percent of the adults 18 and over, and 14 percent of the 12-17-years-olds have used marijuana at least once.

The most striking of the use patterns revealed in the survey is that 41 percent of the adults and 45 percent of the youth who have ever used marijuana reported that they no longer use the drug. When asked why they had terminated use, the overwhelming majority of adults, 61 percent, specified, among other reasons, that they had simply lost interest in the drug.

Effects

Any psychoactive drug is potentially harmful to the individ-ual, depending on the intensity, frequency and duration of use.

Marljuana is no exception. Looking only at the effects on the individual there is little proven danger of physical or psychological harm from the experimental or intermittent use of the natural preparations of cannabis, including the resinous mixtures commonly used in this country. The risk of harm lies instead in the heavy, long-term use of the drug, particularly of the most potent preparations.

The experimenter and the intermittent users develop little or no psychological dependence on the drug. No organ injury is demonstrable.

Some moderate users evidence a degree of psychological depen-dence which increases in intensity with prolonged duration of use. Behavioral effects are lesser in stable personalities but greater in those with emotional instability. Prolonged duration of use does increase the probability of some behavioral and organic consequences including the possible shift to a heavy use pattern.

The heavy user shows strong psychological dependence on marijuana and often hashish. Organ injury, especially diminution of pulmonary function, is possible. Specific behavioral changes are detectable. All of these effects are more apparent with long-term and very long-

WASHINGTON, March 22 term heavy use than with shortterm heavy use.

> The very heavy users, found in countries where the use of cannabis has been indigenous for centuries, have a compulsive psychological dependence on the drug, most commonly used in the form of hashish. Clear-cut behavioral changes and a greater incidence of associated biological injury occur as duration of use increases. At present, the commission is unaware of any similar pattern in this country.

Violence and Crime

The weight of the evidence is that marijuana does not cause violent or aggressive behavior; if anything, marijuana generally serves to inhibit the expression of such behavior.

No valid evidence was found to support the thesis that marijuana, by itself, either inevitably, generally or even frequently causes or precipitates the commission of crime, including acts of violence, or juvenile delinquen-

With this framework, neither the marijuana user nor the drug itself can be said to constitute a danger to public safety.

Marijuana and Driving

Recent research has not yet proven that marijuana use signtficantly impairs driving ability or performance. The commission believes, nonetheless, that driving while under the influence any psychoactive drug is a serious risk to public safety: the acute effects of marijuana intoxication, spatial and time distortion and slowed reflexes, may impair driving performance. That the risk of injury may be greater for alcohol than for marijuana matters little.

Obviously, much more research needs to be undertaken in this

The Endangered

About two percent of those who have ever used marijuana, or 500 -000 people, now use the drug heavily. They use it several times day. Because the risk of psychological, and perhaps physical harm from marijuana increases with the frequency, quantity and duration of its use, these heavy marijuana users constitute the greatest at-risk population in the United States today.

The very heavy marijuana user presents the greatest potential concern to the public health. It is the commission's opinion that these heavy marijuana users constitute a source of contagion

Does It Kill?

A careful search of the literature and testimony of the nation's health officials has not revealed a single human fatality in the United States proven to have resulted solely from ingestion of marijuana. Experiments with the drug in monkeys demenstrated that the dose required for overdose death was enormous, for all practical purposes unachievable by humans smoking marijuana,

Birth Defects?

Although a number of studies have been performed, at present no reliable evidence exists indicating that marijuana causes genedefects in man.

However, since fetal damage cannot be ruled out, the use of marijuana, like that of many other drugs, is not advisable during pregnancy.

Brain Damage?

No objective evidence of specific pathology of brain tissue has been documented. This fact contrasts sharply with the well-established brain damage of chronic alcoholism.

Insanity?

Cannabis use has long been known to precipitate short-term psychotic-like episodes in pre-disposed individuals or those who take excessive doses. Some observers report that the prevalence of short-term psychoses as well as the psychotic episodes of longer duration in heavy cannabis users are compatible with the prevalence rate of psychosis in the general population and, therefore, may not be attributable to cannabis use. In fact, some believe that in populations under stress where marijuana is widely used, occurrence of the acute psychotic-like episodes occur less often than one would expect in such a population. Other re-rearchers have disagreed with these conclusions, and the matter is still controversial.

'Dropping Out?'

The fact is apparent that the chronic, heavy use of marijuana may jeonardize social and economic adjustments of the adolescent. The commission has reviewed numerous reported studies and heard the testimony of several clinicians dealing with heavy users of marijuana who exhibit propriate social response. Throughout the commission's deliberations there was a recurring awareness of the possibility that marijuana use may be a fad which, if not institutionalized, pendence, even then the level of psychological dependence is no will recede substantially in time. Present data suggest that this is different from the syndrome of the case, and we do not hesitate anxiety and restlessness seen to say that we would prefer that outcome. To the extent that conditions permit, society is well advised to minimize the number of drugs which may cause significant problems.

For these and other reasons. we recommend to the public and its policy-makers, a social control policy seeking to discourage marijuana use, while concentrating primarily on the prevention of heavy and very heavy use.

Specific Proposals

The commission is of the unanimous opinion that marijuana use is not such a grave problem that individuals who smoke marijuana, and possess it for that purpose, should be subject to criminal procedures. On the other hand, we have also rejected the regulatory or legalization scheme because it would institutionalize availability of a drug which has uncertain longterm effects and which may be of transient social interest.

In general, we recommend only a decriminalization of possession of marijuana for personal use on both the state and federal levels. The major features of the recommended scheme are that: production and distribution of the drug would remain criminal activities as would possession with intent to distribute commercially: marifuens would be contraband subject to confiscation in public places; and criminal sanctions would be withdrawn from private use and possession incident to such use, but, at the state level, fines would be imposed for use

Federal Law

ernor of Pennsylvania, spent 30 minutes discussing the report with President Nixon last night. Although the President knew what the major recommendations were, Mr. Shafer said he "purposely avoided" discussing them. Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said today that "the President still opposes the legalization of marijuane" Mr. Nixon, in a press conference last year, said he would not follow any commission recommendation to legalize marijuaña. But penalties "are a matter which I do think is open to national recommendation with regard to more uniform standerds." Congress called for the appointment of the national commission in the 1970 Comprehensive Drug Abuse Control Act. Mr. Nixon picked nine members, including the chairman, while four came from Congress.

In all, the commission sponsored 50 studies and held nine days of hearings in Washington, San Francisco and Chicago. In addition, members met informally with groups of students at colleges across the country. Mr. Shafer said that some members of the commission-he would not say who or how many— even smoked marijuana as part of their studies on the theory that they couldn't judge it until they tried it. Other members, however, felt that trying marijuana might prejudice their opinion, Mr. Shafer said. As its central thesis, the commission found that "marijuana's potential for harm to the vast majority of individual users and its actual impact on society does not justify a social policy designed to seek out and firmly punish those who use it." Nevertheless, the commission recommended a policy "seeking discourage marijuana use while concentrating primarily on the prevention of heavy an heavy use."

"We believe that the criminal law is too harsh a tool to apply to personal possession even in the effort to discourage use," the commission continued.

In its place, the commission recommended a "partial prohibition" of marijuana use. Produc-tion and distribution would re-main criminal activities and marijuana would be contraband that could be confiscated in public places.

Initial reaction to the report appeared generally favorable. Rep. Edward I. Koch, D., N.Y., who co-sponsored the original legislation establishing the commission, issued a statement saying he was pleased with the report, and plans to offer legislation to bring federal law into line with its recommendations.

The prestigious Drug Abuse Council, a consortium of four foundations, called the recom-mendation for decriminalization of private use and possession "a courageous breakthrough in pub-lic discussion of the issues involved in marijuana use" and "merits consideration by the American specific recommendations.

Reps. Tim Lee Carter, R., Ky., and Paul G. Rogers. D., Fla., urged noncriminal fines for use or possession of any amount of marijuana. Former Illinois chief investigator Mitchell Ware also recommended civil fines, and added a suggestion for mandatory drug education classes.

In another direction Sens. Jacob K. Javits R., N.Y., and Farold E. Hughes, D., Iowa, said marijuana should not be con-traband, that all not-for-profit sales should be free from criminal penelties, and that possession in public of even more than one ounce shouldn't be punished.

French police were reported en route to Tel Aviv to return Mr. Lipsky to France, where he is to stand trial on charges connected with his management of the con-struction firm Patrimoine Fon-

The order followed Mr. Lipsky's agreement to return to Paris voluntarily. The 41-year-old Frenchman has been in a Tel Aviv jail since Feb. 19, where he was to have been held until an extradition hearing in April.

Mr. Lipsky arrived in Israel last September, shortly after a warrant for his arrest was issued in Paris. He asked the Israeli government for immigrant status, but the Interior Ministry post-poned a decision until the judi-

In October the French government applied for Mr. Lipsky's extradition, but Jerusalem refused

ITT: And Now Chile

Jack Anderson, in his column Tuesday, quoted from purported ITT documents which state that TTT dealt with the Central Intelligence Agency over Chile and that the company tried (and falled) in 1970 to generate enough economic chaos there to trigger a military coup that would bring down the elected Marxist president, Salvador Allende. In his column yesterday, Mr. Anderson goes on to show, from the purported ITT documents, that ITT pressed its anti-Allende campaign at the White House and State Department and with the attorney general as well. On Sept. 15, 1970, one document says, the American ambassador in Santiago "finally received a message from the State Department giving him the green light to move in the name of President Nixon. The message gave him maximum authority to do all possible—short of a Dominican Republictype action—to keep Allende from taking power." But, an ITT report of Oct. 16 said, "It is a fact that word was passed to Vlaux (Gen. Roberto Viaux, identified as ITT's choice of coup maker) from Washington to hold back last week..."

* * * These allegations are astonishing. It is perhaps one matter that ITT-whose Chilean telephone property, valued by it at some $103 million, was nationalized last Septembermight seek to intervene in a foreign election, dealing with a CIA activist in Washington and seeking out in Santiago a general (Viaux) who is now in jail facing courtmartial on charges of participating in the 1970 slaying of the army chief of staff. If true, this is outrageous enough. In any event, publication of the charge is likely to make it politically impossible for any Chilean government to consider ITT's compensation claim for a long time to come. In view of reports that Chile was about to make an important compromise on that claim, in order to break the political logjam in its foreign loan and debt renegotiation situations, this is a particularly inopportune time for the story to break.

It is quite another matter, however, and a far graver one, that President Nixon stands charged in what is purported to be an authentic ITT document, of personally approving an attempt "to do all possible-short of a Dominican Republic-type action—to keep Allende from taking power." This is a charge so serious that it is hard to see how anything short of a major congressional investigation can dispose of it. Hardly less pressing is the question of why, if a "green light" had been given on Sept. 15, it had turned red by Oct. 16. Could there have been a threat of exposure of a CIA hand, possibly in the Senate? We do not know. So much of an open secret is the CIA's support of the victorious Christian Democrat Eduardo Frei in Chile's 1964 elections, however, that suggestions of a CIA role in 1970 cannot be easily dismissed.

That the latest Anderson columns will let President Allende play the aggrieved nationalist, and thereby gain him months' reprieve from his own deep political troubles, goes without saying. The resultant surge of anti-American propaganda can be all too well predicted. What must concern Americans more, however, is the revealed troubles of our own. ITT is now accused of manipulating not only key aspects of domestic policy but of foreign policy as well. What kind of system is it that permits a powerful corporation to wander through the corridors of official power as though they were its own? How can it be-if it is so-that in 1970 an American President could consider the possibility of acting to prevent the democratically elected president of a supposedly friendly country from taking office? The dismal swamp we have been talking of in connection with the affairs of FTT for some days is becoming ever more dismal.

Jobs Over 'Revolution'

Britain has decided to go for economic growth and jobs for the unemployed even at the risk of renewed inflation and the cost of cherished Conservative dogma. Prime Minister Edward Heath's "quiet revolution," pased on the steady disengagement of government from the economy, was effectively buried by the budget—one jammed with social, economic and fiscal benefits—that Chancellor of the Exchequer Barber delivered to Parliament.

tracked. Over seven months the government set aside $1.6 billion for projects aimed at cutting unemployment, now at a postwar high of more than a million workers. It provided $88 million to bail out Clydeside shipbuilders and far more to salvage Rolls-Royce-two of those "lame ducks" of industry that Heath had once suggested must die if they could not survive without government subsidy.

Yet, the budget was surprising for the sweep of its benefits and subsidies. It not only cuts sales taxes to a top of 25 percent (partly in preparation for introduction of the European Common Market's value-added tax in 1973); but it removes 2.7 million lowincome Britons from the income tax roll entirely, in addition to hiking family allowances. The aged get bigger pensions, and additional increases in social welfare benefits are promised for "every year in the future." There is something in the package for business firms of every sizetax relief; investment write-offs and regional subsidies. After noting the cornucopia of benefits, some observers said the budget more resembled the work of a Labor than a Tory chancellor.

With Britain's foreign trade slumping back into substantial deficit last month for the first time in a year, Barber had to be candid about the risks by such a budget. But currency reserves approaching $7 billion clearly made this the time to shoulder those risks in order to help industry gear up for stiffer competition inside the Common Market and, above all, to slash away at a level of unemployment that had become too costly in every respect-including the political

The Indian government has declared that it will not negotiate repatriation of the prisoners until Pakistan recognizes Bangladesh, the new Bengali nation whose guerrilla forces shared in the surrender of the Pakistani troops. India's demand that Bangladesh be recognized is understandable enough. Certainly mutual recognition and respect among all three nations on the subcontinent is prerequisite to peace negotiations already too long delayed. Yet it is neither reasonable nor legitimate to tle prisoner repatriation to the recognition

The third Geneva Convention of 1949 declares: "Prisoners of war shall be released and repatriated without delay, after the cessation of active hostilities." Both India and Pakistan are parties to that agreement.

Indians should not so soon forget President Bhutto's generous gesture in unliaterally releasing the Bengali leader, Sheik Mulibur Rahman, shortly after the fighting ceased and Bangladesh proclaimed its independence. It is time India reciprocated this generous gesture, which had more practical value for the Indians and their Bengali allies than any number of captured enemy soldiers. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

U.S. Busing Issue

The argument about busing is perhaps the most contentious domestic political issue in this election year in the United States. In this situation. President Nixon has been characteristically quick to grasp the initiative. He has announced that he will ask Congress to legislate to get around the Supreme Court ruling. This may be difficult on a constitutional issue, but it is not unlikely that Congress will pass the President's proposed new law while representatives' eyes are on the November elections; at least, the effect of this could be to buy time while the legal wrangles continued.

Seventy-Five Years Ago

March 23, 1897

PARIS-A fierce journalistic warfare has broken out in New York. The World and the Journal, it seems, were some time ago excluded from a Newark library. The Sun, whose pugnacious spirit was aroused, gave prominence to the incident and bitterly attacked both papers. This was followed by the exclusion of the two journals in question from a large number of libraries and clubs. And now, all three papers are attacking each other in their columns.

Fifty Years Ago

March 23, 1922 BERLIN-The decision of the Reparation Committee definitely fixing the amount Germany must pay this year, and the guarantees she must give, has produced a depressing impression here. That the demands constitute the most serious claims yet made on Germany is the general verdict in political circles. Germany must now raise 60 billion paper marks by additional taxes; Members of the Reichstag are saying that no government can do that and remain in power.

The Arabs and Israelis Finally Agree on Something

Advantages of a 'Weird System'

By Arthur Schlesinger Jr.

NEW YORK-Presidential primaries are fully as haphazard and illogical as their critics say they are; and, now that half the states have adopted one form or another of the primary, the argument for transforming this de facto national primary into a uniform and rational system is strong indeed.

However, while I certainly don't want to lag behind other highminded citizens in denouncing primarles, especially their price time, money and human fatigue (of candidates as well as of voters), I think that our present crazy-quilt system has certain points. With all its illogicality it may even provide a certain rough justice,

For the range a candidate must roam in the 1972 primaries actually offers a not too unreasonable cross-section of the country-east and west, north and south, urban and rural, industrial and agricultural, prosperous and stagnant, white, brown and black, Moreover, combat experience provides not too bad test of a candidate's capacity. Agreements to limit campaign spending can do something to control the financial burden,

Educational

In addition, no one should underrate the educational effect of primarles on candidates. I saw Adlai Stevenson in the 1956 primarles, cursing them all the vhile but nevertheless learning good deal about the United States he had not known before. We all remember about John Kennedy and West Virginia in 1960. A uniform national primary may save a candidate's health, but it will not teach him nearly as much about people, problems and emotions he must confront as President.

Beyond general complaints about the irrationality of the system. Democrats-and in 1972 presidential primaries are mainly Democratic problem—claim particular grounds for distress. "We are tearing ourselves to pleces," one constantly hears. "Why don't we stop this waste of time and money, unite behind one man and concentrate on the Republicans?" I would make the opposite case: that, without the stimulus, excitement and instruction provided by the primaries, the Democratic position would be insecure indeed.

The President can command the public ear rather readily from the White House. But the opposure it can get. The electorate we have been ruthlessly invaded by ants, Conditioned by now to pretending that insecticides just don't exist, I tried, with moderate success, an old Florida technique of squashing about two-thirds of the gathered tribe. The remaining third did, true to form, dart frenetically here and there, pick-ed up the occasional corpse, and disappeared, messengers of death, back to wherever they had come from. This stemmed the flow for about six hours, and then I had to start all over again-and squashing ants is a demoralizing and ominous experience.

Then my French landlord appeared on the scene. He told me to sprinkle fresh lemon juice along the path which the ants took from the entry point outdoors, and to rub shelves, window ledges—any point of entry or transit which they use-with the pulp of the lemon rind.

I did so, and at this writing, I have not had one single ant in my kitchen for seventy-two hours. It cost me two lemons, the kitchen smells sweet, and I cannot fathom, but would be interested to know, why it was so effective.

In 1972 there is apart from Gov. Wallace, no such drastic ideological disagreement. Even Sen. Jackson has displayed unexpected dovish propensities. In any case, neither Wallace nor Jackson is a likely winner. This means that, while the losers at Miami Beach will feel that they could have served the common cause better than the winner, they will have lost only the prize and not the cause itself. This will enable them to accept the outcome with greater equanimity and move on more cheerfully to the struggle against the common foe,

If the Democrats were to agree tomorrow on a single candidate and thus eliminate primary contests, they would save their party money and their candidate wearand-tear. But they would lose several months of precious time during which they could dramatize candidates and issues and carry both to the people. Fascinating Aspects Of Public Discussion

By Robert G. Kaiser

dards, public discussion of political issues in the Soviet Union is conducted in the quietest of hushed tones. An outsider could be forgiven for concluding that there was really no public dis-cussion at all. But there is, and it can be fascinating.

Since the days of Lenin, the Soviet Communist party has be-lieved in lectures for the public. Local party organisations, educa-tional groups in big cities, fac-tories and workers' clubs all stage ctores by officials who can speak for the regime. Curious audiences often try to get them to answer for the regime, too.

The questions from the audiences at such lectures can be a lively indication of the curiosity about the rest of the world which seems to pervade this society. The questions also reveal the Soviet citizen's healthy sense of numor, and his access to information that is not provided by official Soviet, news media.

The other night several hundred Muscovites of all shapes and descriptions gathered in a down-town auditorium to hear two journalists and a professor discuss world affairs and agriculture. The journalists were obviously the main attraction; the professor of agriculture was an unneeded extra.

The first journalist reviewed the international scene, concenrating on Europe and the Middle The people of Europe were ready for a new era of peace and détente he reported—he knew this firsthand from a trip to Paris last fall. "I was able not only to read the newspapers and listen to the radio in those (Western) countries," he confided. "I was also able to meet real people. And they all favored more security in Europe."

The Middle East situation is still serious, nearly five years after "the moment when Israel attacked the Arab lands," he said. His time was up before he had mentioned either President Nixon's trip to China or his forthcoming visit here.

The professor came next, with lines like: "I'm not going to list a lot of statistics, you already know them, so I'll mention only a few..." As he reviewed the achievements of Soviet agriculture and the beauties of Soviet farmland, the professor lost his audience. A loud hum of conversation rose in the hall. Toward the end of his talk a lady in a front row said in a loud voice: "Enough!" The speaker, a happy-looking man with a wrinkled red face. took it all in good humor,

He depicted Chancellor Willy Brandt sympathetically, describ. ing his self-imposed exile during the Nazi years (not widely known here), and his efforts to reach constructive agreements with the socialist camp.

No Time for Fun

Life in West Germany is full of "stress," he said—working people were so busy making money that they had no time for any fun. "The pay is high, but they don't get any joy from it." he

He quoted a West German who told him that the stores were full of goods but when one visited the room table was always empty. On the other hand, the same West German was quoted as saying, when one is received as a guest in Moscow, the table is always piled high. The audience smiled approvingly at that.

Questions for the speakers were written out and passed up to the tront of the hall. Each speaker got a pile and sorted them out. The journalist who had reviewed the world scene answered first.

He had received dozens of questions, and he held them like a wad of tickets in the hand of compulsive bettor at a racetrack. He summarized those on a similar subject. For instance, he said he had received questions about a mysterious explosion at a factory in Minsk which-contrary to the usual silence on such disasters—was reported though not explained, in the Soviet press. "I don't know any more than was in the newspapers," he said, to the obvious disappointment of the crowd. Did he think Sen, Edward M.

laughter filled the auditorium. The professor of agriculture may not have captivated the audience with his speech, but he had no shortage of questions to

Why are the vegetables in state stores of worse quality than those in the private farmers' markets? The audience laughed: He replied, also grinning, that this was a scientific question to which the party was paying serious attention. Why are we (the Soviet Union) buying grain from Canada? The professor observed that this question came from an "informet" citizen (the recent $330 million Soviet contract to buy food grains from Canada has not been mea-tioned in the Soviet press).

The answer was that the Soviet Union had to help other socialis countries which could not gro enough food. Moreover, they sold grain to other countries like Pinland. It was a complicated matter, but "in any event, it's not a lot" that's bought from Canada

In For the Handicapped -Snowdon's Platform

By Judith Weinraub LONDON (NYT)—At 42, the former Anthony Armstrong.

As the nusbend of Princess Margaret, who is fourth in succession to the British throne, his name appears regularly in the daily newspaper lists of engagements, a continuing chronicle of the whereabouts of royalty. But even more relentiess; the name Snowdon appears as a picture credit for the cover of Vogue or designates the author of a documentary film.

"There just isn't enough time." Lord Snowdon admitted recently, looking suntanned from a recent photographic assignment in Peru. There are times one has to do one thing, and give up something else one wanted to do."
But in his 20-by-18-foot office,

Smoking Gauloises and drinking Guinness in his office the other day, Lord Snowdon dis-cussed his latest brainchild, an electrically powered mobile plat-form for the disabled, called the

"It's frightfully basic. It's not great invention at all," said Lord Snowdon, who studied engineering and architecture at Cambridge. "It's just the simplest possible solution to some problems that confront the disabled every day."

The Chairmobile was born four summers ago, as a present for Quentin Crewe, a journalist and friend of Lord Snowdon's who has been wheelchairbound for

"He was perpetually surrounded by a piece of totally undomestic chrome," said Lord Snowdon. Its a very nasty environment to be contained in all the time. It wouldn't fit into the elevator, he couldn't pull himself close enough to the table, and be automatically became a point of focus, just because he was in a wheelchair."

No Changes

Lord Snowdon was particularly concerned that not only did the same chair have to serve most handicapped people as a desk chair, a dining chair, and a chair to relax in, but also that it fixed its inhabitant in the same position all the time.

"I said to myself, let's try to think of a means of transport from A to B 'n the cheapest and most versatile possible way," said Lord Snowdon, tracing through the air with a pencil.

Unearthing the battery-operated motor from a Japanese toy car, which belonged to his son, Viscount Linley now 10, Lord Snowdon went into his basement workroom and emerged four days later with a motorized wooden platform on wheels, on which almost any chair could fit and which had a removable steering column

"The kids didn't mind," said Lord Snowdon, referring also to his 7-year-old daughter, Lady Armstrong-Jones. cause I showed them what I was doing and explained what it was 107.

When it was finished, he loaded the platform in the trunk of his car and took Mr Crewe to the King's Road in Chelsea for lunch. Lord Snowdon borrowed a chair from the restaurant, placed it on the platform, and wheeled Mr. Crewe, a restaurant critic. inside.

"The fantastic thing about it is that you don't see it," said Lord Snowdon excitedly. "For the first time in years, Quentin looked the same as everybody over for the final one.

It is this psychological situation of a wheelchair that Lord Snowdon's invention can alter. As Quentin Crewe, its original recipient, explained in a phone conversation recently, "Other conversation recently.

people don't think of you so pityingly. For some reason, when you're in an ordinary wheelchair, people think you're mentally defective as well.

"But this machine has the quality of a toy; it's a fun thing. People even ask if they can have a go on it. Nobody ever asks me if they can try my wheelchair. "I took it to a party the other night and buzzed around. One can get oneself a drink, or even get away from rather kindly bores. It's absolutely lovely." Same Height Mr. Crewe pointed out that one of the most unexpected pleasures of the versatile platform was that a high chair or stool could be placed on it, thereby making him the same height as everyone else standing "Instead of tooking up to people all the time, which creliberating. "I can-do a mass of things I can't manage in my wheelchair," said Mr. Crewe, who does not use a motorized variety. "All the small things, like getting a cigarette or answering the telephone. And if I use the elevator,

But the material available from the publisher was skimpy, and the score was not tucked away in the composer's drawer, but that of his librettist, Baron Philippe de Rothschild. The baron had also all but forgotten the fruit of his collaboration with the composer, and when Nice called for further clarification of his work, he had to beg for time to dig out Milhaud's manuscript and the plot he had based on one of his own poems yearnings with the earthiness of the wine harvest in an evocation of nature's constantly self-renewing life cycle. And Philippe de Rothschild is perhaps uniquely qualified in such a subject. Poet and translator of poetry and plays—his bilingual anthology of Elizabethan verse is used in French schools, and his translation of Marlow's "Doctor Faustus" is now in the proof stage— he is also owner of Château Mouton-Rothschild, one of the greatest Bordeaux vineyards.

"I came back to France after the war and went to Chateau Mouton for the harvest," he re-called, "and I wrote the poem in the mood of that experience. A friend saw it and suggested that I use it as the basis of a ballet." It was shown to Milhaud, who

'They have been extremely faithful to my work there," he said. He recalled with pleasure a "re-markable" staging of his largescale opera "David," written for Jerusalem's triple millennium, that was mounted in the Mediterranean city five years ago. He also was pleased that the Opera-Comique recently paired his "Les Malheurs d'Orphée" with "Les Mamelles de Tirésias" ("a work I adore") by his colleague of Les Six, Francis Poulenc. But on the whole, the work of this French composer is, if not ignored, strangely slighted in France. "I did some statistics once." said the composer, whose output is approaching 450 in opus num-bers, "and calculated that about 85 percent of my works had their premieres in other countries." He particularly praised productions in Berlin, one pre-Hitler and the other postwar, of two of his major works— the opera "Chris-tophe Colomb" and his setting of

His most re-cent major work, "Saint Louis," an opera based on poems by Paul Claudel, had its premiere last Saturday by the Italian Radio in Rome and will have its

The composer showed a visitor his upright working desk next to a picture window, demonstrating how he could write sitting straight instead of hunched over a table, as he had done for decades. Talk turned to his methods of work, and the word "inspiration" was tentatively put forward.

"Inspiration?" he exclaimed. "Do you want to see what my inspiration is?" He turned his wheelchair and rolled toward the desk, picking up a fountain pen and a bottle of ink.

"There. That's my inspiration. I can't work with a pencil."

We graduated from one of the world's toughest business schools

California. One of the wealthiest states in the USA. With a phenomenal rate of expansion in agriculture, commerce, and international trade. And an industrial growth so diverse that it comprehends both movie making and space projects.

California has grown to be one 🦓 of the world's most dynamic economies. And Security Pacific Bank has been doing business there for over one hundred years.

So when it comes to understanding the needs of an expanding multinational company we're in a rather special position. Because during that time we've fearnt some good hard facts about expansion. From practical experience.

Firstly, when a bank services growing corporations, it's got to be alive and growing itself. So while California has been expanding, we've been keeping pace with it.

Our first tiny branch office in Los Angeles has grown into one of the two largest branch systems within the USA.

We're now financial partner to 90 of the top 100 corporations in America.

And we're also one of the ten largest American banks, with assets of over nine billion dollars (that's a growth of three billion dollars over the last three years).

Then, because our clients are doing business in a rapidly expanding economy, we know that our time is your money. So we act fast. To make sure you get the best possible advantage from a medium-term Euro-currency loan, as quickly as possible. And, of course, once we've negotiated a loan we follow it up with continual counselling.

And lastly, because our clients are multinational, we offer them a multinational service. Our international network covers the most important financial centres of the world, from South America to Australia, from the Far East to Europe.

And each one of our international offices combines an inside working knowledge of the economic climate of its own country with the special experience we've gained from California's dynamic economy. Because, above all, an > expanding company needs a bank that understands expansion. And we've learnt that from California. At first hand.

Analysts speculated that Mr. Halaby's resignation may have been one of the conditions tied to the $300 million bank loan refinancing to be completed later this month.

"Certainly it will be a good thing psychologically for Pan Am, but I don't really know how you can put it in earnings per share figures," said one analyst.

"Pan Am has more than just top management problems to contend with. The problems go all through the company. Just to name a few: Its too early delivery of the 747, low Atlantic fare yield, poor cost controls, and Teamster union problems," he indexes added.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

CFP to Explore for Uranium

Cle Française des Pétroles (CFP), France's largest oil company, plans to enter the uranium exploration field as a means of diversifying its activities. CFP has an agreement with Union Corp. of South Africa for "joint action in Australia," and is currently negotiating for ura-nium research permits in Africa, Asia and the United States. There is no indication whether it is negotiating alone or in association with Union Corp. or other firms. It said its decision to enter the uranium market resulted from studies which show that there is "a very marked tendency" to accelerate the construction of nuclear power stations throughout the world.

In EEC Anti-Trust Suit

Canco Expected to Make Settlement Offer

BRUSSELS, March 22 (AP- on a private settlement, which DJ).-Continental Can Co. (Canco) is expected to make a formal proposal tomorrow to settle the EEC Commission's precedent-setting anti-trust case against the U.S. packaging firm and its European subsidiary, it was learned today.

The proposal, a draft of which was discussed yesterday by top EEC and Continental Can officials, calls for the subsidiary, Europemballage Corp., to divest certain manufacturing facilities in order to comply with the commission's December decision.

The decision cited Europemballage for taking unfair advantage of a dominant position in the EEC for certain types of metal containers and bottle tops through the acquisition of a Dutch packaging firm, Thomassen en Drijver-Verblifa. The decision did not specify, however, exactly how Continental Can should comply.

Draft Proposal Outlined Continental Can's draft pro-chairman, Charles B. Stauffacher, to EEC commissioner Albert Borschette, calls for Europemballage to sell off manufacturing facilities with sales of an amount that was not specified.

It is understood the proposal stands to be accepted or rejected by the nine-man commission according to the amount of sales that Continental Can is willing to give up to a competitor that would be formed out of the divested facilities. Other aspects of the proposal appear satisfactory, at least to the commission staff.

Mr. Stauffacher was meeting with Europemballage officials here today to determine, among other things, the amount of sales to be offered, a company official con-

It is understood that the commission staff wants Europemballage to give up sales equal to the turnover in the cited products by Thomassen en Drijver before it was taken over. Background papers prepared for the commission decision indicate this amounted to about $20 million in 1969, out of pro forma sales of $238 million for Europemballage, including the Dutch firm,

The Europemballage official said tomorrow's meeting would not necessarily be the last.

An EEC official indicated that if an out-of-court settlement could not be reached soon, the company would have to carry through with the appeal it launched last month to the EEC Court of Justice in Luxembourg. Europemballage filed the appeal to meet a court deadline for launching such action, intending to carry through only if the talks would like to see the issue reach the court because it raises constitutional questions that have not previously been tested before the EEC's top judicial authority.

U.S. Firms' Foreign Affiliates Cut Rise in Spending Plans to 7%

WASHINGTON, March 22 (Reuters).—Foreign affiliates of U.S. corporations plan to increase their capital outlays this year by $1 billion, or 7 percent, over 1971 to $15.2 billion, according to the latest Commerce Department survey.

This represents a downward revision from the $1.4 billion. or 9.5 percent, rise anticipated in the previous survey last Outlays for 1971 have been revised downward to show an increase of 9 percent, or $1.2 billion, from preliminary estimates of $1.7 billion.

The adjusted figures bring 1971 total spending to $14.2 billion and estimated 1972 outlays to $15.2 billion, the department

The current estimates for 1971 and 1972 are considerably lower than the increases of 15 percent and 21 percent registered 1 1970. The slowdown primarily reflects a shift in spending in Europe and Canada, from rapid growth in 1969 and 1970 to nochange in 1971 and a small gain in 1972, the Bureau of Economic Analysis commented. This was coupled with a sharp decline in spending by Latin American mining and smelting affiliates. Strong growth of manufacturing and petroleum-affiliate outlays in Japan partly offset these developments.

Belgian, Swiss, French Deal On Jeumont-Schneider Nears

PARIS, March 22 (AP-DJ).-Baron Empain of Belgium has reportedly agreed in principle to give up his 61 percent interest in France's Jeumont-Schneider to Brown-Boverl of Switzerland and its French subsidiary, Cie. Electro-Mécanique (CEM).

The remaining 39 percent is owned by the Schneider group.

Baron Empain conferred with French government officials yesterday, following the recent decision by Westinghouse Electric Corp. to abandon its bid to acquire the Empain interests in the French heavy-electrical concern

The reported agreement between Baron Empain and the government is said to involve a mergar of Jeumont-Schneider with CEM, but with a majority of the capital held by French interests. Additionally, Jeumont-Schnelder's turbo-alternator division would be absorbed by Sté. Alsthom, a subsidiary of Cie. Générale d'Electricité (CGE).

Investments in a dynamic country?

We've launched

The new fund is managed by "Interfonds" Investment Trust Company, Basle, with the Swiss Bank Corporation acting as custodian bank.

The aim is to offer you a chance to participate in a carefully-selected portfolio of Japanese securities supervised by specialists. And a stake in Japan's economic future.

Selecting the right Japanese securities can pose problems for the private investor; after all, Japan is a far-off country and he's unlikely to be familiar with the names of many Japanese companies.

This is where the mutual fund comes in. Close contact with top Japanese economists and stock-market specialists, expert management, balanced risk distribution by economic sector and company.

It all adds up to the ideal vehicle for the private investor who wants to place part of his capital in Japanese securities. Ask for the detailed brochure containing information on Japan and the past performance of the Japanese market together with a summary of the Fund Regulations and a subscription form. Just mail the coupon.

Swiss Bank Corporation, 4002 Basle (Switzerland) Please send me the detailed brochure on JAPAN PORTFOLIO, the new Swiss mutual fund for Japanese securities.

North and South are unlikely to forget the disaster they suf-fered on the diagramed deal. West opened the hand with a normal bid of one spade, and his partner scraped up a raise to two spades after North over-called two diamonds. South jumped to three no-trump on the strength of his spade stopper and diamond fit, gambling that his partner could stop hearts. However, West made an imaginative jump to five spades. He expected to make that contract and wanted to put as much pressure on his opponents as

As South's three no-trump bid had implied a degree of diamond fit, North might have ventured six diamonds, but the fact that South was known to have some spade strength deterred him and he passed. He knew his partner

North could have retreated into six diamonds, a contract that succeeds unless East is inspired to lead a heart or a club instead of a spade. But instead he bid an imaginative five no-trump, anticipating that his partner would win an early trick and run seven diamond tricks. He had a chance to retreat to six diamonds when West doubled, but stood his ground.

The seven diamond tricks were available, not to mention five club tricks, but the early trick was not. West led the king and ace of hearts, receiving a highlow signal from his partner, and continued with the heart ten This was an unusual play that deliberately blocked the suit and forced his partner to lead spades after making the fourth heart

THE DONNER PARTY By George Keithley. Brazilier. 254 pp. $6.50. NIGHT OF THE AXE By William Mulvihül. Houghton Mifflin. 185 pp. $5.95.

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

OUT of the western migrations of the 1840s with their bodykilling experiences. George Keithley has made a lean, taut, harrative poem that moves with the speed and terseness of a killer shark, and William Mulvibill a tidy novella that combines bloody adventure and overt symbolism in a neat mixture of its own. The year of these occurrences is the same, 1846, but everything else is different. "The Donner Party" is based on fact, "Night of the Axe" on fancy, that is, as far as the incidents are concerned, though the truths to be drawn from Mr. Mulvibill's fiction are far from fanciful

Mr. Kelthley concentrates on the telling and he permits him-self no digressions. Although it is a longish book for a poem, it contains no set pieces, no lan-guors, no flat places. He never takes time out for extensive description of the landscape, never speculates on the future of the wilderness, never descants on the nature of man. When he does make a brief aside into description or rumination, the passage has the same economy as the rest of the narrative:

We followed the flat flanks of our cattle across familiar fields

until the green skin

of the Sangamon river could be seen sunning itself like a lazy snake.

The fatigue he felt was under his skin and wouldn't wash away.

The story of the Donner party is reasonably well known. A group of pioneers led by George Don-ner set out from Springfield, Ill. April, 1846, for California There were some 80 people in the group toward the end. They tried a new route south of the Great Salt Lake and were trapped by the Sierra snows that blocked their passage. A handful tried to make their way over the snows: most of them camped down waiting for rescue parties. Those who did survive resorted among other things to cannibalism. It was, in the words of one man. The most

Mr. Keithley has told this story in the person of George Donner and told it as a running narrative, setting forth exactly what it meant to be part of such a wagon train and what was involved in cutting a trail through the wilderness. He has so paced his story and so balanced the element that the most startling events of that unbelievable winter come as a natural consequence of what went before.

spectacular catastrophe of the

overland crossings."

The guidebooks the pilgrims use are inaccurate but they have the power of print and when the party comes across truthful information, they choose to believe the books. Food, water and forage for the animals are unpredictable. The Indians are not necessarily hostile, but they are mischievous. Add to these the crotchets and quirks of human personality and the sum is the making of a first-class disaster. In a fit of anger one man king another Others kill in cold blood for greed. Some steal gold and trinkets out of covetousness, Or course not all in the party are evil. Brave acts, sacrifices, unselfish love for family and fellow. man are present in abundance. But the destructive force of eval is greater than the unifying force of good. Especially when rature is all on one side. For his purpose the author has devised a three-line stanza virtu-ally unrhymed. The lines are of varying lengths, but the unit is not the line but the stanza. His language is lean and stripped, full of verbs and energy; his tone lies midway between the excessively lyrical and the flatly expository. It's a plain style, the only one really for a poem of this length and his purposes. It has the order of a tale to be told and none of the disjunctive, episodic character of the contemporary long poem:

"The Cantos," "The Maximus Poems," Berryman's "Dream Songs," No reader should be put off by the fact that "The Don-ner Party" is 250 pages of poetry, For in addition to all else, it has the readability and accessibility of the best prose.

"Night of the Axe" is also about a pioneering group fighting its way westward, with the same divisions, the same grating and opposing personalities. These are crystallized when the party comes across a huge pine, evidently centuries old, that somehow embodies all that is majestic in nature. Some of the group feel it a sacrilege to touch it; others can't resist mutilating it, worrying it and finally trying to cut it down The differences are more though, than the matter of a tree For if the band should stop to cut it down, the delay may senously damage its chances of getting through. So the tree pro-vokes a contest of wills between those who want to go and those who want to stay. The destructive element loosed by the pine doesn't stop with itself, and soon fear and terror are added to the other hazards of the journey. There are no false heroics in the book. Men can be coerced by fear as by more noble motives, and it sometimes takes much heroism to turn away from a fight as to enter into one. Mr. Mulvihill's hero, Benedict, is no typical Western gun slinger. He is a decent human being who for a change wins out. It seemed to me that the ob-ession of those who stayed to cut down the tree was excessive and that the author never made quite convincing the spinelessness of the others who remained with their demented leader, when their own danger became plain, Never-theiess Mr. Mulvihili has written a modest, well constructed take in the tradition of "The Ox-Bow Incident," and "The Mountain Lion," an adventure story that is at the same time something more than an entertainment

Mr. Lask is a New York Times book reviewer.

St. John's, Niagara Win in NIT

But Redmen Lose Star With Injury

By Sam Goldaper NEW YORK, March 22 (NYT). -St. John's reached the semifinal round of the National Invi-tation Tournament last night, but its victory may have been costly.

While the Redmen were overwhelming Oral Roberts, 94-78, in the second game of the college basketball doubleheader before 13.198 at Madison Square Garden. Mel Davis, their scoring and rebounding star, was at St. Clare's Hospital having his right know Niagara also gained the semi-finals, upsetting Princeton, 65-60, and will meet St. John's in the second game tomorrow night after Jacksonville opposes Maryland.

Davis's injury was diagnosed as a pulled tendon behind his right knee. He may be out the rest of the tourney. The 6-foot-7inch forward injured his knee midway in the first half when he came down with a rebound. After sitting out almost two minutes, he returned to the game but reinjured the knee with 5 minutes 51 seconds left and his team ahead, 37-23.

Davis was carried off the court on a stretcher and was taken to the hospital. He had scored 12 points, shooting five for 10, and grabbed 12 rebounds. Pro scouts said they had never seen him.

Greg Cluess, the St. John's center, made up for the loss of Davis. The captain scored 27 points, almost 12 more than his season average. He also grabbed 21 rebounds, 18 in the second half, as his team outrebounded Oral Roberts, 65-47.

Although Oral Roberts cut the St. John's lead to six points with 8 1/2 minutes remaining, the nation's top-scoring college team was never really in the game.

Oral Roberts suffered its second loss in 28 contests and had a 22game winning streak snapped.

Fugua Scores 30

Richie Fuqua, the nation's second leading scorer with a 35.9 average, finished with 30 points, despite constant harassment by Mike Keilty, Fuqua collected 18 points in the second half on 50 percent shooting. He was four for 15 in the first half.

Niagara ended Princeton's 10game winning streak. The Tigers posted a 20-7 record.

In the final seven minutes, when Niagara failed to score a basket and had to rely on foul shots for its final 11 points, Taylor missed two key leyups. On three straight steals, the Tigers got only two points, at the foul line, twice throwing the ball away.

Report Made to UN on Racism in Sports

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., March 22 (Reuters1.-Davis Cup tennis matches and New Zealand sports organizations which fail to oppose racial segregation will be principal targets of a new international campaign against racism in sport, the UN special committee on apartheid was told yesterday.

Dennis Brutus, president of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee, said one of the most serious examples of the erosion of the campaign against all-white South African teams was the New Zealand Rugby Union's invitation to the Springboks to tour next year. "Rugby is the sport most closely associated with apartheid," Brutus told the UN committee.

"A success here is a success for apartheid. "This is likely to be the most important issue for some time, particularly since so large a section of the people of New Zealand have expressed their opposition and have pledged themselves to protest actively against racism." Week of Talks

Brutus is one of a number of people in various fields invited to take part in a week-long seminar in which the committee is focusing attention on apartheld and seeking ways to limit South Africa's contacts with the world South African Peter Hain, a leader of the British movement against racial discrimination in sport, is also due to testify.

Brutus said that after a period of success in combating South Africa's participation in international sports with all-white players, a 'recession" had set in, and the trend must be reversed at once. The clearest evidence of the success of racist elements, he said, was the holding of the ca, which has teams of many countries which professed opposition to apartheid competition. Brutus said that, "as ever," Britain was one of the firmest allies of the South African racists, "particularly through the openly racist Conservative government."

The U.S., Israel and Japan also were actively aiding racist sportsmen of South Africa,

But organizations opposed to segregation in Britain, New Zealand, Australia, the Netherlands and the United States all had made commitments of support to the new international campaign against racism in sport. The aim was "coordinated worldwide action whenever a decision is taken in international sport," he said.

"The first targets are likely to be in tennis, with special reference to the Davis Cup, and all New Zealand sports bodies which do not oppose racism in sport."

Brutus said the new organization would seek formal consultative status in the UN.

HONOLULU, March 22 (AP).— The National Football League awarded next year's Super Bowl to Los Angeles last night, selected Houston as the site of the 1974 game and announced it was shifting the Los Angeles-based Pro-Bowl to another city.

The unusual and surprise triple announcement came, after two hours of voting, on the ninth ballot by the NFL owners in their annual meeting. It was the first time the owners had voted on two successive Super Bowl sites.

The opposition will come from four Alfa Romeo $3/3TTs and a pair of Lolas. Alfa won three endurance races last year, but 1972 has been disappointing, partly because the new design has not been completely sorted out and partly because the car weighs 130 pounds more than the Ferraris and Lolas.

The Paper Shredders

WASHINGTON. - Among the many startling revelations Department didn't ..." that have come out of the Intertional Telephone and Telegraph hearings is that TTT sent a team of security men down from New York to shred all of the memorandums in the company's Washington office. TTT said this Was absolutely necessary because Buchwald Jack Anderson printed a confidential memo of lobbyist Dita Beard's (she has since denied writing it. The ITT people assured the Senate Judiciary Committee that they only destroyed "old memos" and "useless papers" and did not cut up anything that had to do with the hearings. They also said Dita Beard not only participated in the paper shredding but got so involved in it that she wanted to throw everything away.

I can just imagine the scene as the security people bring in the paper shredder, which looks exactly like a wastepaper basket with blades on it.

"Well, Dita, we've come down from New York to destroy all your old memos and papers, but of course we have to be careful we do not destroy anything that could help the Senate investigation regarding our contribution to the Republican convention." "Of course. Where shall we begin?" "How about this program from the Kentucky Derby?"

"Oh boy, was that a Kentucky Derby! Did I ever tell you guys what I said to Atty. Gen. John Mitchell at Gov. Louis Nunn's house before I passed out on the floor?"

"We'd rather not hear about that, Dita.

16,988 Italian Divorces

ROME, March 22 (UPI).-A total of 55,439 Italians applied for divorce in 1971—the first full year since parliament introduced divorce in December, 1970-and 16,988 divorces were granted, the Central Institute of Statistics said today.

"Dita, please, Can we get on with the shredding? Now, what about these folders on the San Diego Sheraton Hotels?"

"I thought you wanted me to give them to the Republican National Committee to show them what they were getting for our noble 400,000-dollar commitment."

"Dita, there is no 400,000-dollar commitment." "Oh? Why didn't someone tell me, so I wouldn't have put it in my memo which Jack Anderson printed?"

"You didn't write a memo about the 400,000 dollars." "Well, if I didn't write it, why are you shredding it?

"We're just trying to clean out our files, Dita. It's company policy to do this every two years. Now what about this autographed photo of Peter Flanigan from the White House?"

"You're not going to shred that, are you?" "We have a saying at ITT headquarters, Dita—better shred than dead"."

"Why are you shredding my Hartford Fire Insurance policy?" "It's been cancelled. We don't want anyone to think that one of our lobbyists had any connection with Hartford Fire Insurance. But since we own the Grinnell Fire Sprinkler Co. too, we'll install new sprinklers in your house."

"Bless you. I knew ITT had a heart. What are you doing with that book?"

"We don't believe you need 'Six Crises' by Richard Nixon anymore, Dita. Someone might think the President was involved in our anti-trust settlement." "Well, can I keep "The Richard Kleindlenst Cookbook'?" "Dita, you know better than that ... I think we better shred this too."

"But that's my ITT certificate of merit. I earned that." "Of course you earned it, Dita. We'll never forget what you did for the company. I guess that does it. Oh, there's one more thing. Where did you park your Avis car"" "You're not going to shred my Avis car, are you?" "Headquarters thinks it's best that we do. There is no telling what Jack Anderson could find in the glove compartment."

The Liberation of Melina Mercouri

PARIS (IHT).—Women's Lib is an increasingly fashionable subject. Within one week Time magazine devoted an entire issue to the American woman from the banker to the soap opera heroine ("Relen Trent had 14 flances, and none of them were worthy of her"), in France (where, incidentally, the equivalent of Ms. is apparently Mad.) an ad for a new Levittown was directed at "les membres du Mouvement de la Libération de la Femme," in England Punch admitted it was planning a special women's issue ("we see considerable advertising potential for all this"). and in Singapore, Miss Anita Chuan an-nounced her hope of becoming her country's first female hangman, stating, "I believe you only have to pull a lever to do

The position of women seemed a good subject to discuss with Melina Mercouri, not only because she comes from the country that gave us the first sex object. Helen of Troy (the first male chauvinist nie was probably Zeus), but also because it provides a change from the daily preoccupations of a woman who has led the strange island life of an exile since the colonels took away her citizenship in 1967.

Not that one ever gets very far away from the subject of Greece with Melina "Of course, I'm a feminist," 'she says. "In fighting for women I am fighting for myself, for my civil rights, my rights as a

"Saying no to a dictatorship has made me say no to a lot of things."

The island Melina occupies is a rambling Left Bank apartment full of Greeks, with an intemperate climate of black clouds, sunny patches, lightning and illusory rainbows. The local drink is a delicious calé des exilés. Served cold, of course.

Melina's autobiography, "I Was Born Greek," is selling nicely (25,000 copies of the Prench edition were sold in the first two weeks) and she has two new LP records out. In the fall she will do Cacoyannis's production of "Lysistrata" in New

She doesn't feel that "Lysistrata" is especially relevant to today's feminism. Not sleeping with your husband for the cause of peace is dépassé. In any case she is not interested in exchanging one state of bondage for another:

"I want to be free to love whomever I choose. If you have to stop loving for the sake of Women's Lib, I couldn't be for it. I neither want to be a man nor to do the same things as a man."

Melina is working right now on a book about women. It will consist of interviews with four women, with side views of such current boons as plastic surgery. "We can have plastic surgery and men are still afraid to. That's our sole advantage. Thanks to plastic surgery a man of 50 today is older than a woman of 50. It used to be the

Grandfather

In Greece, Melina was raised in the house of her grandfather. Spiros, the incessant mayor of Athens the served for 30 years) who had an eye for the ladies and no respect for women: "My grandfather used to say to me what pity you're a girl, you could be something extraordinary. And I saw injustice with my father who went off with a woman while my mother was pregnant with my brother.

"I don't know much about the different women's groups and I haven't read the literature, but I know about women's problems pragmatically because I come from an underdeveloped country. I come from a country where there aren't enough schools for boys, much less for girls. I was raised to be a geisha. I was trained to be a mistress or a chamber pot. I had to survive through a man

When I first knew Dassin I did terrible things. I was always accusing him of being unfaithful. We were madly in love but I was antagonistic. One day he took me by the shoulders and said, Why are you so antagonistic?' I'm still not entirely freed

People think that change for women will come through the developed countries. I say it will come from the underdeveloped countries, just as Marxism did. Everyone expected Marxism to take hold first in Germany, instead it started in an underdeveloped country, Russia.

"When I was young in Athens and rather glamorous I wasn't invited to certain houses. The wives were afraid of me. I despised them for it, but now I understand. In Greece if a woman loses her husband her whole-life is destroyed. All she can hope to do is find another man to take care of her. In America a woman can lose her husband, but she doesn't lose her life. When I was in America it was the first time I wasn't afraid of other women and they weren't afraid of me. I have confidence in women, and respect for them. "But all this shouldn't sound too earnest," Melina added. "I say all this with a wink because I am still looking for answers. We ere looking, we make mistakes, but in them we will find our truths." At this point the telephone rang: Would Melina Mercouri confirm a rumor that she was about to make peace with the junta for the good of her country?

The wink disappeared, the storm clouds gathered, the air became as cold as a caje des extles. How could anyone suggest such a thing? "Quels salopards." Melina said, pacing furiously. The calm was broken. Is there ever any respite? "If you want to know do I have time to sleep, the answer is yes," Melina said. you want to know how well I sleep, that's another question."

Clutching a red rose presented by an admiring male, Germaine Greer, Women's Liberation acvocate, left Sydney, Australia yesterday for Bangladesh to investigate claims that 300,00; women were raped by Pakistan soldiers last year. "I want it find out what happened to the story that was never writtenthe story of the 300,000 women who were raped and dishonored and who couldn't go back to their villages," she said.
